

SALLY POTTER

Sally Potter's work has, from the early 1970's, embraced dance, performance, theatre, music and film. Since her first cult hit with THRILLER (1979), Potter has concentrated on film and directed her first feature, THE GOLD DIGGERS, starring Julie Christie, in 1983. Potter then made a short, THE LONDON STORY, and several documentaries before the internationally acclaimed and multi-award winning ORLANDO, starring Tilda Swinton, took her work to a global audience. This was followed in 1996 by THE TANGO LESSON which again garnered several awards. In 2000 Potter wrote and directed THE MAN WHO CRIED, starring Christina Ricci, Johnny Depp, Cate Blanchett and John Turturro.
